Preparation Your Application

Here are some things you should know or have on hand when completing your application:

- To apply, you must first register for an account on aspirations.org. Your account allows you access to your profile, unsubmitted applications and approval and endorsement status. For the user profile you need to have your home address, phone number, and zip code. You also need to create a memorable password for your account.

- Award Applicants must have a US Social Security or Tax I.D. number that you can provide if needed. You don’t need this for the application, but will need to provide this information if you are declared a National Award winner.

- You need to know if you have an immediate family member who is a staff or board member of National Center for Women and Information Technology (NCWIT). This list of staff and board members is listed here: http://www.ncwit.org/about.team.html

- You need to have a working email address that you check on a regular basis.

- You need to know the name and email address of your parent/guardian. The email that you list for your parent/guardian must be different from the email that you listed for yourself, and should be one that is checked regularly. You should inform your parent/guardian that you are applying for this award. He/she will receive an email with instructions to view and approve your account registration.

- You need to know your school’s name, complete address and telephone number.

- You need to have the email address (preferably personal) of an educator who can endorse your application. This could be a teacher, counselor, principal or other school official that knows your work and accomplishments. The person you list as your school official should be notified that you are using them as a reference, just as you would for a college or job application. It is also usually best to ask their permission to use them as a reference. The school official you list will receive an email with instructions to view and endorse your application.

- Have someone proofread your entries (before you paste them into our application portal) and do your own spell-checking because the application portal does not offer this feature.

The AiC Award offers both a national and local competition to generate support and visibility for women's participation in computing nationwide. Last spring, over 2,300 women were recognized representing all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and overseas US Military Bases.

We want to honor even more students this year and that means we need you! More than two-thirds of applicants say they applied because they were encouraged to do so by an educator. You inspire these young women every day and are the people who employ new ways to engage them. It is through your teaching that they see the value of computer science education. Past award winners report becoming more “Proud, Determined, Confident, Encouraged” about futures in computing from winning the Award.

In addition to identifying a pool of talented young women, NCWIT also recognizes outstanding educators who play a pivotal role in helping to encourage young women to continue exploring their interest in computing and technology. Through the NCWIT AiC Educator Award, each recipient is given up to $1000 in cash and professional development funds and is honored at the regional award ceremony alongside the students. “This has opened up mind to finding new ways to help these ladies achieve goals they once thought were impossible” Educator Award recipient.

Applications for the 2016 Aspirations High School and Educator Award open September 1, 2016. For applications, or for information about NCWIT or the AiC program go to www.aspirations.org or contact aspirations@ncwit.org.
